THE STORY OF BRADFORD, IN STONE.

Little Germany is Bradford's historic mercantile quarter, located just off the city centre's main shopping streets.

The area is home to 55 listed buildings packed into a small corner of Central Bradford – making it one of the most remarkable heritage destinations in the UK.

As 19th Century Bradford grew from a sleepy Pennine village to one of the great trading capitals of the World, Little Germany was the epicentre of the Wool Industry with its grand Italianate warehouses and extravagant commercial building.

But beyond the breathtaking built environment, Little Germany has a fascinating social history too.

As the name suggests, its development is intrinsically linked to the migration of Jewish-German merchants to the city, many of whom would go on to do great things for the people and places of Bradford.

Later, the area would be the backdrop for social reform at the turn of the 20th Century, and would eventually go on to become a centre for culture and the creative industries.

Today you are invited to discover the fascinating history of Little Germany for yourself... through self-guided tours, heritage events, and new opportunities for investment, it's time for Bradford's fascinating past to help shape its future.
